Life at APTS

This past trimester our students at Asia Pacific Theological Seminary (APTS) came from 28 countries and our faculty from eight countries, and we had 47 graduates—a record for APTS. Imagine putting people from so many cultures onto one campus to live together, study together, and worship together. It is very rewarding, but it also comes with challenges. Different cultures look at life differently—issues such as dating and marriage, ethical standards, worship practices, dress, food, and many others. How do you put people from so many cultures together and expect there to be no conflicts? It is amazing how God helps us all to adjust, and when there are conflicts, he helps us work them out. After graduation, our students return to their countries to minister, having made close friends from all over the world—friendships that will last for the rest of their lives.

It is amazing how students and faculty come from all over the world and become one family in Christ. If you are interested in getting an accredited, economical, cross-cultural education in a beautiful, safe environment, consider APTS.
